Court moves to incorporate technology in providing the court record to the public

Judiciaries nationwide respond to economic challenges of providing access to the public record

November 2011, New York - eScribers, LLC, a national legal transcription company, recently announced being awarded a mandate to provide transcription services to the Vermont judiciary.

In their Request for Proposal, Vermont's Court Administrator emphasized the importance of the court transcript. "Judges, attorneys, litigants and others often need written transcripts of courtroom proceedings in order to review what was said at the hearing. These transcripts are the official record. It is crucial that the transcripts be produced accurately and timely."

"eScribers is ideally positioned to serve Vermont's Judiciary" says Jason Gottlieb, eScribers' Operations Manager. eScribers will leverage its experience as an approved transcriber in 20 court systems throughout the country to assist Vermont in using technology to create an efficient and cost effective means of producing the court record.

Serving both the court and external customers is our skill set, remarks Eric Solat, eScribers' Director of Sale and Client Relations. "eScribers provides a link between cost effective electronic records and the accurate and timely transcription of those records".
